

Resources with tips for effective online teaching/ education

Resources on how to use technology and on how to structure the content and presentation when delivering workshops online:

- Christopher Pappas: 10 Creative Online Presentation Ideas For eLearning Professionals <https://elearningindustry.com/10-creative-online-presentation-ideas-elearning-professionals> [useful short article – or listen to the audio of this. There are some good tips around presenting to an online audience]
- Mark Zondler: Engaging Your Online Presentation Audience – 15 Best Practices from the Experts. <https://www.mikogo.com/2015/10/27/engage-online-presentation-audience/>
[read about the advice regarding pre-recording the presentation which gives you an option of tweaking it]
- Sarah Bright: 5 Tips for Delivering Killer Online Training. <https://blog.capterra.com/5-tips-delivering-killer-online-training/>
- Faculty Focus Special report: 10 Principles of Effective Online Teaching: Best Practices in Distance Education. MAGNA PUBLICATION
https://www.mnsu.edu/cetl/teachingwithtechnology/tech_resources_pdf/Ten%20Principles%20of%20Effective%20Online%20Teaching.pdf
[mostly targeting university courses, but it should be possible to get some tips from this on how to plan for online participation and how to structure workshop teaching with online participants]
- Online Course in a Box: Delivering Content Online: <http://citl.illinois.edu/citl-101/online-strategy-development/develop-or-revise-an-online-course/online-course-in-a-box/designing-your-course/delivering-content/delivering-content-online> [brief overview with tips similar to those mentioned in the blog by Sarah Bright listed above. This link has extra resources.]
- Technology and tools for online learning. <https://www.jisc.ac.uk/full-guide/technology-and-tools-for-online-learning>
[You may find some ideas for technologies that can help engage online participants. Moreover, if you plan online actual online courses in ethics, this may be a useful guide to help identify the type of considerations you will need to address when setting up an online course]